

University of Baghdad

College Name	Political Science
Department	International Studies
Full Name as written in	DUNIA JAWAD MUTLAQ
e-mail	Dr_sharify2000@yahoo.com
Career	<input type="radio"/> Assistant Lecturer	<input checked="" type="radio"/> Lecturer	<input type="radio"/> Assistant Professor	<input type="radio"/> Professor
	<input type="radio"/> Master		<input checked="" type="radio"/> PhD
Thesis Title	- The New International Regionalism Phenomena and its future dimensions Pacific -Asia as case in study
Year	2008

Abstract

(The New International Regionalism Phenomena and its future dimensions Pacific -Asia as case in study)

The new international regionalism phenomenon is representing one of the most political and an economic phenomenon that dominates the international community of post cold war.

Though, the impacts and results of international regionalism will be very effective on the centres of power and influence of international system which will lead to change of international system structure if it with great strategy and economic capacities can predominate on international system when ever change is permitted.

So, the study of new international phenomena of post cold war will tackle pacific- Asia as case in study describing it a significant strategy , geopolitical , economic and political study about pacific -Asia , when it described a competition focuses and regional conflict between international and regional powers in the new international system.

The regional relations in Pacific -Asia is considered one of the most important international relations in the current international system, because it deals with a clear pattern to change international ruling trends of international relations from period to another. in conformity with going on renewal international changes in the light of crystallizing of new international regional phenomena that have many economic, strategic and political dimensions.

This study depends on the assumptions that the new international regional phenomenon is considered relatively recent with strategic and geopolitical dimensions in a edition to economic and political one. But it also has ideological dimensions which affected and will influence greatly on the distribution of power and influence center of international and regional system and regional ,especially the essential and vital like Pacific -Asia.

This study is divided into an introduction, and four chapters which are also divided into sections with and Conclusions.

The first chapter is about new international phenomena concept and it is into three sections, the first section tackles the concept of regionalism as linguistic and expression, while the second section is the definition of the new international regional phenomenon, meaning and limit its conception and the third deals with the most motives and reasons of this phenomenon.

The second chapter is about international regionalism in application as Pacific-Asia case in study, it is with two main sections, the first section tackles the geostrategic, economic, technical and demographical situation in Pacific-Asia during cold war from 1945-1991. While the second deals with political, strategically and economic mechanism and structure, in time of struggle between the two great powers or among the camp and political system led by United States of America and alienated states for one hand and the camp and communist system led by Soviet Union in the other hand.